

U.S. Wastewater Treatment Plants - Partial List					March 2010
The following information is a partial list of wastewater treatment plants in the United States. It was largely assembled by InSinkErator using information collected from the individual, listed wastewater treatment plant's web site(s), In cases where information could not be found or documented, it was obtained from the EPA (where noted) and its document, "Opportunities for and Benefits of Combined Heat and Power at Wastewater Treatment Facilities, April 2007." The EPA document is here: http://www.epa.gov/CHP/documents/wwtf_opportunities.pdf Information collected Jan.2009-March, 2010. InSinkErator believes the information summarized below to be accurate at the time this list was assembled (3/09) and will update it from time to time. However, these web sites and even the wastewater treatment facilities themselves are constantly being updated or changed. Accordingly, InSinkErator recommends that you check with your wastewater authority for the most complete, accurate and up-to-date infomation. How to use this information: 1. Find your state and municipality. Information is arranged in alphabetical order by state. 2. If the plant shows a "Yes" in the "Methane Capture" column, the plant reports that it reuses the methane captured during solids processing to create power for the plant or plant operations. 3. If the plant shows a "Yes" in the "Beneficial Biosoldis Re-Use" column, the treatment plant reports its biosolids are used as a fertilizer product. If noted as "partial" the plant reports that biosolids are used in composting and land application, or may be combined with municipal solid waste for co-disposal. If shown as "Unconfirmed", the site has used language associated with reuse ("land application", "biosolids") but insufficient information was found to confirm. 4. If the plant shows "No" in both columns, the plant does not capture methane from solids processing or turn the solids into a fertilizer product.
